Recommendations

2023 - 2024

Our current code enforcement system is not always working for city residents, organizations, and employees. When residents report problems at vacant properties near their homes, they are met with a confusing system and siloed communication.

By mapping out our existing code enforcement process, we can gain a better understanding of the system as it stands now. This will help us identify pain points and areas for improvement. Strategically deploying our code enforcement process will enable us to more efficiently address problem properties.

- improve clarity and legibility of code enforcement communications (e.g. Building Division letters)
- advocate for priority process improvement recommendations, provided by Hester Street & Center for Community Progress
- discuss priority property improvement allocations (e.g. building stabilization, demolition, legal action)

HEALTHY HOMES CODE ENFORCEMENT

Project in partnership with Homes For All STL & Building Division to identify opportunities for improvement of code enforcement for low- and fixed-income residents, and ensure safe and healthy housing.
